English for Business Teacher Workshop for Our Team

Taught by Tasha Defries, Shay Coyne & Andrew Miles

Teacher management & special classes for unusual students by Tasha

When working in big companies with many students and many groups, issues are bound to arise. How do we deal with difficult students? How do we manage teachers to help get the best out of them?

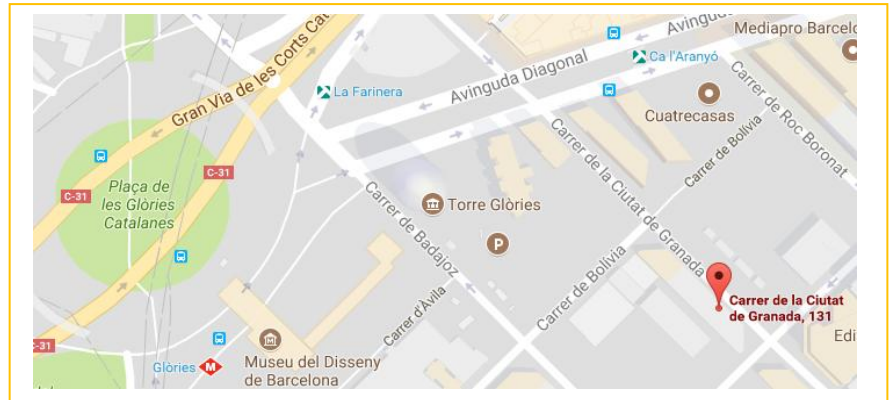

On top of that, with many students come many learning styles. Some students want to learn very specific language that they can utilize at work and still have fun in class. How do we plan these lessons?

Lesson aims and learning outcomes by Shay.

We will look at the difference between aims, goals, objectives and how we can turn these into learning outcomes for students. We will also look at how we can incorporate success criteria into our learning objectives so that both teachers and learners are aware of what is expected from them.

Three things I've learnt in thirty years teaching by Andrew

We'll discuss learning styles, adapting to technology and things you should never forget to teach—even if books do.
